Chaos Candle

Ready in ~30 minutes

Serves Magical ends of many kinds

Recipe & Process originally developed at Nuchwezi Esoteric School.

Essential Materials

- Wick
- A mould (say empty plastic soda bottle)
- Wax (could be bees or paraffin wax)
- Stearin (10% of qty of wax)
- Boiler Pan (enough for heating & melting the wax)
- [optional] Wax Perfume or Scented Oil ("essential oils")
- [optional] Wax Dye or Crayons
- [useful] Toothpick or pencil
- [useful] Pin or Somewhat big sewing needle
- [for magick] Your Desired Intent Sigilized on Paper

Process

1. Prepare the Mould:

- Start with an empty plastic bottle.
- Using a heated knife or scissors, cut off the upper quarter of the bottle to leave behind a neat cylindrical plastic mould.
- Using a heated needle, wire or pin, pierce a hole to allow passing in a wick through the bottom centre of the mould.
- Pass the wick through the bottom centre of the mould.
- Fasten the wick at the top of the mould onto a horizontally

- lying toothpick, pencil or pen to help hold the wick in place later on.
- Allow a bit of the wick to protrude through the bottom hole in the mould - just enough so you can tie a knot of it or keep the wick in place later.
2. Place the boiler on the heat.
  3. Add stearin to the boiler and let it melt.
  4. Add wax dye or stripped crayon of desired colour (you can later add more to bring molten wax to desired hue).
  5. Add the wax to the boiler and let it melt.
  6. Add your Magical Charging Materials:
    - Could use specially prepared oil such as charged oil, and might also include scented oils or wax perfume.
    - For Chaos Magicians, could take a written statement of intent, sigilize it as per your method, then take the final sigil and incinerate it, take the pulverised ashes and then add them to the melting wax.
  7. Do some Alchemy: stir the entire solution well to mix up everything well, taking note of hue and scents. Then remove the molten solution from heat and set it aside to cool a bit - enough to allow the solution to be pourable and readily solidifying when scooped up with a finger (esp. because we are using a plastic mould, and don't want to pour very hot wax into it so as to disfigure the mould).
  8. Pour the molten, cooling wax into the mould, ensuring that the suspended wick stays well fixed at the centre of the mould as the solution sets.
  9. Transfer the mould with the setting solution into the bowl of cold water to fasten the setting nicely.
  10. Once set, carefully remove the mould from the cold water, then trim off the extraneous wick at the bottom of the mould as well as enough from the top - enough to allow us to have sufficient wick length to light the candle later.
  11. Your Chaos Candle is ready for use!
    - Essentially, the magical theory is that even by merely lighting the candle, your magick is kicked into action, and your original, integrated intent gets fired up to manifest your will! Basic Candle Chaos Magick!

Tips

1. Using crayons to colour these candles is cheap and allows for much artistic creativity.
2. It is possible to prepare different colours of wax in turn or separately, and then creatively pour them into the mould so as to produce interesting multi-colored candles - some folks consider the colours themselves to contribute to the magic of the candle!
3. Though beeswax is great, it is more expensive, and might need to be mixed with other wax kinds to increase candle's burning time. Good thing is that it comes with a pleasant natural perfume to it.
